

Alan Caruba, Editor

Bookviews.com, (September, 2006)

“To tell you more would be to spoil it. Kenneth MacLean has written The Mind Keepers ($17.95, New World Books Press, Middle Island, NY), and if you like suspense combined with the threat of a new weapon that can control individuals and large populations by filling their minds with thoughts that control their actions and can kill them, you will enjoy this book. This is science fiction and murder mystery, and the result is a search for the killer that wields this weapon, a search that turns up secret government experiments and has implications for international politics. A former FBI agent is drawn into this dangerous world when his best friend is murdered and, like the concentric rings of a drop of water in a pool, the story reaches out to envelop the readers with a well-drawn cast of characters and an action-packed plot. You will never look at a microwave tower in the same benign way.”